Take advantage of our FREE Will service and create your legacy today

Little Bert was severely unwell – he was painfully thin with pressure sores over his body. Bert's untreated wounds had been attacked by flies and there were hundreds of burrowing maggots inside. He was also suffering from a highly contagious respiratory disease called strangles.

Despite the horrific ordeal little Bert has been through, he has an inspirational determination to survive.

Welcome to the latest issue of Bransby Life

In our last issue, I shared the financial challenges we faced and the difficult decisions made to reduce costs. Over the past six months, our team has worked tirelessly to adapt, ensuring we continue to care for equines in their darkest hour. Thanks to the incredible support from both new and existing fosterers, we've been able to rehome rescued equines through our Perfect Partner scheme—freeing up space to help even more horses in need.

This issue highlights the ongoing impact of our welfare work, including the journeys of Misty and Ginge, who have received expert care from our dedicated teams (read their stories on pages 10 and 18). You'll also find updates on Stig, Cobalt, and Rusty—rescued in difficult circumstances but now thriving in loving foster homes.

Your continued support makes all this possible. From our first encounter with an equine in need to providing treatment, rehabilitation, and rehoming, we are committed to offering lifelong care.

A huge thank you from me and the team at Bransby Horses. Enjoy the Spring sunshine!

With very best wishes

Remembering HOVIS

In late February, we received the sad news of Hovis' passing, who was a truly wonderful horse.

Hovis became well known for his weekly 'Friday Diaries' in Horse & Hound, which were later turned into a popular series of books. His charming and witty nature brought smiles and laughter to many within the equine community, Fridays won't be the same without him.

The team at Bransby Horses worked closely with Hovis and owner Karen Thompson for many years, attending events alongside the pair like Your Horse Live and the Royal Windsor Horse Show. Members of the Bransby Horses team got to know Hovis very well over the course of his life, he now holds a very special place in their hearts and they will miss him greatly.

Hovis was a great ambassador for the charity's work, raising vital funds, from the profits of books to organising raffles and attending events. We will be forever grateful for the support from both Hovis and Karen.

"My sympathy and thoughts are with Karen and her family at this very sad time."

"We are truly grateful to Hovis for all he has done for the charity over the years"

STIG OF THE DUMP

Three Years On

Stig's life has changed drastically since his rescue and whilst he's 'forever safe' under the ownership of Bransby Horses, his true home is with Victoria.

Some of you may remember the story of a pony found abandoned on a landfill site in Gainsborough, our first rescue of 2022. The young piebald cob was aptly named Stig, from the children's book 'Stig of the Dump' and with no traceable owner, he was taken into the care of Bransby Horses.

Nine months later, Stig was preparing for life in his new home with fosterer Victoria, who loved him from the moment they met. "I feel so lucky to be able to give him a new start where he will be pampered and loved forever."

Two years on and 'Stiggy' or 'Stiggy the tank', as Victoria fondly calls him, is simply part of the family. He was a quiet pony when they were first introduced, but it didn't take long for Stig to truly settle in.

"He was so quiet when I went to meet him, it was like we were on a date and then we got married and I saw the real him. And he has got such a personality." Explained his fosterer. "He just wants to know what's going on, he's not scared of anything. And he's just the nicest pony, such a sweetheart."

While Victoria was talking, Stig was trying to chew on his lead rope, a characteristic that dates back to his initial rescue, when handlers gave him a lead rope to carry to keep him entertained.

One aspect of fostering Stig that proved challenging, was managing the weight of both him and companion Cyril, as the two equines have vastly different nutritional needs. But Victoria had a solution to this.

"So, my brilliant idea, which I raised with my husband and he instantly said no and yet still Padus is here, was get another [pony] with the same nutritional needs as [Stig]."

She saw Padus' advert on the Bransby Horses website, put in her application and was soon welcoming another addition to the herd.

Stig's life has changed drastically since his rescue and whilst he's 'forever safe' under the ownership of Bransby Horses, his true home is with Victoria.

"The support we've had since we've had him from Bransby has been amazing, so I think if anyone is ever unsure about whether to rehome or not, do it. There's no question. He's got a home for life."

Safeguarding Horses Together:

Bransby Horses Partners with Lincolnshire Police

In a significant step towards improving the welfare and safety of loose horses across the county, Lincolnshire Police and Bransby Horses have partnered. Following 130 incidents of loose horses in the past 12 months, Lincolnshire Police's Rural Crime Unit are now better equipped to manage such situations thanks to donated headcollars and lead ropes from Bransby Horses.

The essential equipment – 20 headcollars and lead ropes – were initially donated by Cobbs Country Store to Bransby Horses. Recognising the critical role the police play in responding to loose horse incidents, Bransby Horses passed the equipment on to Lincolnshire Police's Rural Crime Unit to ensure officers are prepared when they encounter horses in need.

This equipment is now available in police stations across the county and every rural crime team response vehicle. Officers can now act swiftly and safely when managing loose horses, ensuring the welfare of the animals and the safety of the public and officers.

The headcollars are fitted with QR codes, which when scanned with a smartphone, provide officers with information on how to approach, catch, and lead an equine, as well as contact details for Bransby Horses and other charities.

Bransby Horses, with its expertise in horse rescue and welfare, has long worked with local authorities to assist in situations involving loose or abandoned horses. This collaboration with Lincolnshire Police's Rural Crime Unit further strengthens the charity's efforts to protect horses in the community.

A spokesperson from Bransby Horses said, "We are delighted to support the Rural Crime Unit by donating these headcollars and lead ropes. It's important that those on the front line are equipped to handle situations involving horses safely and this donation will help ensure horses are brought to safety quickly."

This collaboration highlights the importance of developing relationships between animal welfare organisations and law enforcement to address issues impacting rural communities. Together, Bransby Horses and Lincolnshire Police are making Lincolnshire a safer place for horses and those who care for them.

Tricky Rescues and Tough Decisions

Back in June 2024, Misty, a 19-year-old, semi-feral and partially blind Welsh pony, was in desperate need of help.

Misty was originally rescued from the Welsh mountains as a semi-feral pony with an unknown history. She ended up in the care of Lorna Seal when her previous rescue home hoped she would settle as a companion to Lorna's other pony – but sadly Misty did not cope as well as everyone had hoped.

She managed to escape from the safety of her field and was running free across the Lincolnshire Fens. Her new owners couldn't catch her and were becoming increasingly aware of the danger she posed.

A friend suggested she call Bransby Horses and soon our Rescue Support Team (RST) was sent out to help, including handler Jane Dunn who has vast experience of working with feral ponies.

Jane was the first person to get near Misty and managed to clip a lead rope onto her headcollar, holding on as Misty attempted to gallop off. Jane knew if she let go, there would be no more second chances as the authorities would not allow Misty to run free for much longer.

After a successful capture, Misty was taken back to Bransby Horses and Lorna made the difficult choice to sign the pony into our care.

The team at the Animal Reception Centre (ARC) tried their best to get Misty settled, introducing her to a potential companion and seeing how she handled life in her new surroundings. The Welsh pony was incredibly nervous and upon further examination, it became clear that Misty's vision in her remaining eye was limited.

The team tried to accommodate the type of care that Misty would need, but the distress she was experiencing, not only due to her mistrust of humans but also her lack of vision, significantly affected her quality of life; she was afraid much of the time and this would not improve. It was decided that the kindest option for this pony would be euthanasia.

It was a tough decision, and we were glad we could give her the best possible care while she was with us.

Cobalt and Rusty's Happy Endings

Cobalt and Rusty are two ponies whose stories we have shared with supporters from the very start, before they were even born.

Back in 2021, our final rescue of the year was a large-scale operation involving 40 ponies and several leading equine charities, with five equines ending up in our care. It wasn't long before two of these ponies gave birth and we welcomed Cobalt and Rusty into the world.

Growing up together, they formed a close bond and were experiencing everything life had to offer. As yearlings they were both very independent and it wasn't long before they were ready for a brand-new adventure, not just away from their mums but away from Bransby Horses altogether. In 2024, both Cobalt and Rusty found their Perfect Partners through our rehoming scheme and went their separate ways to start a new life with their fosterers.

"Cobalt is an absolute delight and everyone who meets him instantly falls in love with him." Says Marie, Cobalt's fosterer, "He loves his brothers and is often the instigator for playtime in the field."

In the upcoming months, Marie is planning to do some in-hand showing, an introduction to bridles and walks around the village with Cobalt, all of which will help his education as a young pony and keep him healthy.

Marie's daughter has been taking charge of Cobalt's care, providing him with one-on-one attention, which he loves, and putting herself on 'tooth watch' as Cobalt starts to lose his baby teeth.

Arriving last summer, Rusty has settled in very well to his new home. "He is so inquisitive, always enthusiastic to play games with targets, balls, flags and tarps." Says Rusty's fosterer.

"He has become more confident over the winter, exploring different places on in-hand walks and playing with his field mate. We can't wait to develop his life experiences over the spring and summer this year, he is such a special pony."

Rusty and Cobalt's happy endings were only made possible by supporters like you. Your generous donations allowed us to not only rescue their mums back in 2021, but also provide them with a safe environment to grow up in before they were ready to move on.

Donkey Diaries

We know that our donkey residents are a firm favourite with supporters, so we thought you might like to know what some of them have been up to, with snippets from their very own diaries.

Dear Diary 05/02/2025

Today was a great day. It started off well with a lovely breakfast but then got much better once we realised there was a Donkey talk happening. Donkey talks are the best because we meet lots of new visitors and get plenty of attention from them too. It's great to experience these events while we're still at Bransby Horses, it may not be too much longer till we find our Perfect Partner and start life in a new home.

Mario and Luigi

18/02/2025

Dear Diary

My friends and I spent the morning relaxing in the barn before our handlers took us on a walk to the outdoor school. I got to run around and stretch my legs; I was so excited I even let out a few kicks and bucks which is very unlike me. I also saw some ponies over the fence and tried to say hello, but they were busy grazing.

Marlene

Dear Diary

27/01/2025

There's been a few storms lately and I've never been more grateful that we have our cosy barn to protect us from this awful British weather. Today I spent most of my time dozing on the huge straw beds our handlers make for us. They're very comfy and even turn into a perfect midday snack once I've finished napping. I also got to try some fruit tea, which I've decided is my new favourite drink.

Matilda

Dear Diary

28/11/2024

Something rather funny happened today. It was time for our regular check up with the farrier and I convinced my friends that it would be hilarious if we all ran away from him. It's very unlike us to do this so our farrier was very surprised, the look on his face was brilliant. My handlers tried to seem unimpressed, but I could tell they were enjoying it as much as we were.

PONY HAS LIFE CHANGING EYE OPERATION

A rescue pony is adjusting to a new way of life after having his eye removed following an accident.

Back in February 2024, Welsh cob Ginge severely injured his eye in his field; it's not known how the injury happened, but it's thought he may have come into contact with a sharp twig while foraging in the hedgerow.

The injury was causing him significant pain and after not responding to treatment, the Bransby Horses' veterinary team decided the best course of action would be to remove the eye under general anaesthetic to prevent him suffering further

The team that looked after Ginge were unsure how he would respond to the treatment, as he can be a challenging pony to handle due to his life before rescue, particularly when injections are involved.

Bransby Horses' vet, Emma Tune, said: "Ginge's operation took a couple of hours and all went well. He was a very good patient and it was so lovely to see how much more comfortable he was as soon as his damaged eye was removed.

"I've been monitoring him regularly while he has been treated with pain relief and antibiotics and I'm happy to report that his surgical wound has healed really well. Ginge has definitely taken it all in his stride and is back to being his cheeky self with his group of adoring mares."

The gelding has been at Bransby Horses since 2007 and the charity's equine handlers have worked hard to help him overcome his fears.

One year on since his surgery and Ginge has adapted very well to life with one eye. Laura Adams, Equine Welfare Team Leader, said "He was much more accepting of the procedure and aftercare than we ever thought he would be and has adjusted really well afterwards. If anything, he is more confident than he was before.

"We are really pleased with how well he's done."

It is important to give all equines a good quality of life and for us at Bransby Horses this means living outdoors with a herd as much as possible. Unfortunately, despite checking all the horses twice daily and keeping all the fencing and shelters in good condition, accidents do happen and we are prepared to respond quickly to deal with any of these.

He was a very good patient and it was so lovely to see how much more comfortable he was as soon as his damaged eye was removed.

Children Find Abandoned Pony In Their Garden

Spitfire was seen walking along busy roads and had even broken into a few gardens, including the garden of a children's home.

Last year, West Pinchbeck residents called the police after repeatedly spotting a loose pony wandering around the village after he had escaped from his tether. He was seen walking along busy roads and had even broken into a few gardens, including the garden of a children's home.

Bransby Horses were asked to assist with catching the pony and transporting him to a safe place until his abandonment notice expired.

Welfare Manager, Rachel Jenkinson, said: "When we arrived the pony was relaxed and munching on some flowers in the school playground. He was very straight forward to catch and happily loaded onto our trailer. As we are not allowed by law to take any animal without the owner's consent the police placed an Abandonment Notice where he was found, and he boarded with us for the duration."

With no one coming forward to claim ownership of the pony within the necessary timeframe, Spitfire was brought into the care of Bransby Horses.

The manager of a children's home in the village said: "The children loved Spitfire and are sad he's gone but we were so worried about him. He was tethered to a post where he had no shelter and would be there in all weathers.

"We were so pleased when Bransby Horses came to help. We were sad to see him go but glad he is not on his own anymore and in a field rather than just being tied to a post."

Spitfire is doing well with his handling training and the team are working to understand his needs in his herd companions, as he makes it quite clear when he isn't happy. His personality hasn't changed much as he's still a cheeky chap who loves to play, only this time he's not ruining any flower beds.

Spitfire's handlers have found that he loves a groom and going for walks around site, meeting people and equines along the way, with the donkeys being his clear favourite.

Spitfire is now forever safe and it's thanks to our wonderful supporters, and those involved in his rescue, that he can now enjoy life at Bransby Horses.
